Ans : Mugdho's Sacrifice to Establish Rightful Demand

From the very young age, Mugdho always spoke up against injustice. So, when he saw the students fighting against the fascist Hasina government for their rightful demand of quota reform, he could not sit idle in the house.

On 18 July 2024, Mugdho set out to distribute food and water to the protestors who took part in the anti-discrimination students movement. He came out with water bottles and boxes of biscuits in hands. He shouted, "Water, water, who needs water?" He did so believing that the protesters were fighting for justice. Suddenly, law enforcers opened fire to disperse the crowd, and a bullet struck his forehead, exiting through his right ear. Doctors declared him dead upon arrival at Crescent Hospital. His selfless act of service, captured in a video just minutes before his death. Ultimately this tragic incident became a poignant symbol of the student-led uprising, highlighting the struggle for justice and change in Bangladesh.

Mugdho was honored as a martyr, with various tributes. It includes the renaming of a public space in his memory and the distribution of "Mugdho" water bottles at protests. His sacrifice continues to inspire activists until the fall of a fascist government.

The More Man Gets, The More He Wants

Once upon a time, there was a king called Midas. He was very rich but he always longed for more riches. Moreover, he was fond of gold though he had a lot of it.

He thought if he had the golden touch, he would be the happiest man. A wise god granted his wish promptly. Having the golden touch, he was very happy.

Whatever he touched was turned to gold. He felt he was the happiest man in the world. He came back to the palace. Seeing him, his sweet little daughter came upto him. He touched her and she immediately turned to gold. The king loved his daughter more than anything else. He could not bear her condition. He began to weep and felt repentant to get his wish granted. Then the god took pity on him. He took away the power of golden touch.

A Lucky Rickshaw Puller

Rahmat Mia is a poor rickshaw puller in Dhaka. He pulls rickshaw in different areas of the city. One day he saw some men selling lottery tickets. He felt tempted and bought a ticket. He knew the date of the draw. He was waiting eagerly for the day. Then the much awaited day came and he purchased a daily newspaper and went to his slum to check his number on the sly. He was very excited as dream peeped into his heart unconsciously. He took out his ticket from a torn bag agilely. First he checked his own number and then looked on the paper to find his number out. To his utter surprise he found his number at the first prize place. He revised, revised and revised. But he could not believe his own eyes: What a surprise! He is the winner of the first prize that means he is the owner of 50 lakh taka. He thought to himself. He felt shouting but he did not do so. He told nothing to anyone even to his wife. He on the sly communicated with the concerned authorities and got the money within a short time. In the mean time, his name was published in the newspaper as the first prize winner of the lottery. He told his slummates to spend a good portion for the welfare of them. He deposited half of the amount in a bank and with the another half he bought a land and built house there. He also gave his slummates some loans so that they might start a co-operative business. He himself also joined the business and their slums became a solvent one. Thus a lottery changes the fate of some slum dwellers.

Rumour Results in Tragedy

Rati is a worker of a big factory in Dhaka. There are more than 500 workers in the factory. One day while he was working, a loud sound was heard. Fire! Fire! Help! Help! As ill news runs apace, the news spread very fast among the workers. Naturally all the workers got into a panic. They started to run at a time towards the gate of the garments factory. There was only one gate to come out of the factory and only one stair to come down to the gate. So while all the workers were trying to come out of the factory using the only stair, some workers fell down. Rati was one of them. They were trodden down by other workers. At least ten workers were severely injured and two faced death. But fortunately Rati's injury was not fatal. It was irony of the fate that there was actually no fire. In fact, a naughty young worker out of jest cried out saying "fire, fire". The other workers took it true and started to come out of the factory resulting in a tragic accident.

To Rescue a Drowning Girl

Tamim, a student of class ten, was returning from school. On the way, he saw some boys and girl bathing in the pond. Suddenly he heard a girl shouting "Help! Help! save me!"

Tamim at once ran to the spot and without the least delay he jumped into the pond and swam to the best of his ability. As he reached the drowning girl, he first raised his face above the water level so that she could breathe. Then he placed her upon his shoulders and quickly swam back to the edge of the pond.

Tamim knew what to do as he learnt from his uncle, who is a village doctor, how to give first aids to any drowning person. He acted accordingly and soon the girl came to senses. In the meantime, many villagers gathered round him. The parents of the little girl also came running with tearful eyes. Tamim assured them that their child was beyond danger. They became so happy that they could not speak anything. They only began to cry out of joy. When Tamim was about to leave the place, they blessed him from the core of their hearts and requested him to visit their house any day he liked. He agreed and left the place for home with a happy heart.

The Reward of an Honest Rickshaw Puller

Once there lived a poor rickshawpuller. He had to maintain his family consisting of eight members with great difficulty. One day while walking through the fields, he found a purse dropped by a passer-by. He took the purse with a view to returning it to its owner.

In the meantime when the owner found his purse missing, he was at a loss. He did not know what to do. He searched everywhere but all his attempts failed. He thought about all the things kept in his purse: his driving licence, passport, and some 10,000 taka. He thought he lost everything. He felt very upset.

Then he got a call on his mobile. It was the rickshaw puller. The rickshaw puller contacted the owner of the purse over mobile phone. The man instantly came to the rickshaw's address and met him. The rickshaw puller handed over the purse to the man. The man could not think anything. The rickshaw puller's generosity moved him greatly. He expressed his gratitude to the rickshaw puller. He thought such generosity must certainly be rewarded. So he rewarded the rickshaw puller with some amount of money though the rickshaw puller did not want any return.

The story gives us the moral that generosity comes from the mind. Greedy people lack generosity. Helpful people extend the hand by establishing example of generosity.

Ans.

Promise Should be Kept

A long time ago, the town of Hamelin faced with a great problem. It became full of rats. The situation became very unbearable.

The rats were so big and fierce that they fought the dogs, killed the cat and bit the babies in the cradles. They ate the corn in the granaries. They squealed all the time.

At last the people came to the Town Hall and said to the Mayor "Do something about the rats or we will send you packing." The Mayor trembled. He called a meeting of his councilors and talked about the problem for hours. But they could not find a way out. They were in despair. At that moment a pied piper came and went up to the council table and said, "People call me pied piper. If you pay me a thousand guilders, I will rid your town of rats." "All right," said the Mayor. "We'll pay you a thousand guilders. When will you set to work? "Now" replied the pied piper.

The pied piper went to the street, drew out a pipe from his pocket and began to play on it. Soon from every house in Hamelin came out the rats tumbling. There were hundreds and thousands of them that followed him. He went down to the bank of the river Weser and waded into the river. And every single rat, which followed him, was drowned. But the Mayor refused to pay the contracted money. At this the pied piper got angry and played on his pipe in another tune. Hearing the strange tune the children came out of their houses dancing and followed him. The pied piper disappeared behind a hill with all the children and did never come back.

[DB '20; RB '16; CtgB '19; DjB '16]

Ans. The Role of the Spider in Inspiring the King/ Failure is the Pillar of Success

Robert Bruce was the king of Scotland. His army was defeated again and again against the King Edward-I of England. Being defeated for six times he lost his hope and fled away from his kingdom and took shelter in a remote cave (গুহা).

The king was always in a gloomy state for his unhappy condition. Once he was thinking of his sad lot lying in the cave. Suddenly he noticed a spider trying hard to reach the ceiling of the cave. The spider failed again and again to attain success. But it did not give up hope! Bruce saw the spider climbing to the ceiling after six unsuccessful attempts. This dauntless (অদম্য) spider inspired Robert Bruce to shake off the darkness of despair (হতাপ্য).

He gathered an army of strong men and attacked his enemies. The enemies courted defeat (পরাজয়) and Robert Bruce regained his kingdom.

Ans. A Witty Crow/ Where There is a Will, There is a Way

Oneday a crow became very thirsty. He flew from one place to another in search of water. But he found no water. He continued his search for water. At last he saw a jar at a distance. He flew down to it. There was a little water at the bottom of the jar. But it was too low to reach for the crow. The crow tried to upset the jar. But the crow was not too strong to do it.

The crow was in a fix what to do. Reasonably he became very disappointed. He was thinking what could be done. But he could not find any means to quench his thirst. At last, losing heart when he was about to fly away, he saw some pieces of stones lying at a little distance. At once he hit upon (মাথায় আসা) a plan. He got to the stones and took a piece of stone in his mouth. He flew to the pitcher and dropped the stone into it. He continued the same task for several times and gradually the level of water was rising.

At last the water level came within his reach (নাগাল). Then he drank water to his heart's content (তৃষ্ণিসহকারে) and flew away.

Two Rats and the Monkey

One day two rats stole a piece of bread. They tried to divide it into two equal parts but failed. Because each rat wanted the larger part of the bread. They even fought for that. Lastly, they agreed to put up their problem to the monkey who was considered the wisest animal in the forest. They went to the monkey to divide the bread piece properly.

The cunning (ধূর্ত) monkey divided the piece in such a way that it is not equally divided. Then he cut a small part of a piece and ate that instantly (তাঙ্কপিকভাবে) which is larger than the other. Again, the dishes of the scale was unequal and the monkey ate another small part of the larger portion. He continued this method and the bread piece became smaller gradually. The rats understood the monkey's crafty trick and ordered the monkey to stop that. The monkey stopped his deception (অতারণ) but claimed the rest of the bread as his charge.

An Unpleasant Experience of a Country-Man

Mr. Rahman is a retired officer. Usually he goes for a walk everyday early in the morning. One day while he was walking in the morning he saw a man lying senseless by the side of the road. He went nearer to the man. But he could not recognize (চেনা) him because he did not see him before. There was a bag lying before him. So it seemed that the man lying had gone to Dhaka from any country-side making a journey at night.

Anyway, the surrounding was calm and quiet. Mr. Rahman looked around. There was no one nearer as it was early in the morning. After a while he saw a man walking at a little distance (দূরত্ব). He (R) called him and he came. Mr. Rahman said to the man, "Do you know this unconscious man?" "No, I don't know him." replied the man. Then they managed a rickshaw and took him to the nearest hospital. The medical attendant felt the pulse of the man and undertook his treatment (চিকিৎসা). After a while he got back his sense. Then he told Mr. Rahman what actually happened. He came from Rangpur by a night coach. He got down from the bus at Saidabad bus terminal at about 5 am.

Then he was walking through an alley to go to his destination. Just then he fell a victim to mugging. The muggers (ছিনডাইকারী) not only snatched all the things he had with him but also made him unconscious by throwing harmful ointment (মলম) into his eyes.

In an answer to a question he informed him that he would go to Wari. The man also showed Mr. Rahman an address. But what was most surprising was that it was the same address where Mr. Rahman lived at Wari. Then he came to know that the victim was a relative of his next-door neighbour who lived in the flat adjacent (কাছাকাছি) to his. Then Mr. Rahman took him to his neighbour's house.

Outward Appearance is not all

The King of Iran used to invite the great poet Sheikh Saadi to his court. Once on his way to the king's court the poet took shelter in a noble man's house for a night. He was then in very simple dress. The noble man could not recognize him and did not treat him warmly as it seemed to him that Saadi was a poor and ordinary man.

However, Saadi noticed it but did not mind or disclose (প্রকাশ করা) his identity. Then in the morning he left the noble man's house and reached the king's court and while returning he was putting on a gorgeous (জোকজমক) and expensive (ব্যয়বহুল) clothes. This time also he stopped at the same noble man's house.

Surprisingly he found that he was duly respected and honoured then. He was served with sumptuous (দামী) dinner. Noticing it, Saadi began to put the food into his pockets. The man asked him why he was putting the foods into his pockets. In reply he said to him "This food is for my dress. You are treating me well because I have rich dress on." At this the man felt ashamed and begged forgiveness (ক্ষমা) of the poet.

Once upon a time, the house of a rich man was infested with rats. They were living there with great happiness without any fear. They were having a great fun and boldly moved in the house. But the inmates of the house were having a great trouble. One day they brought a cat to drive the rats away. The rats fell in great problem. So they sat together in a conference. Most of them present in the conference argued and contrived in many ways. Towards the uncompromised (অমীরাংসিত) finishing of the conference a young rat vigorously stood up and said that a bell might be tied round the neck of the cat so that they could be easily aware of the sudden appearance (উপস্থিতি) of the cat to escape themselves then and there. All clapped merrily seconding him. But soon after this, an old rat said, "The proposal of the young lad is very good, I support. But who will bell the cat?"

At this all were stone still. There was a pin drop silence in the conference. The meeting ended with no decision and the rats eventually migrated to save their own lives.

The Right Judgement of The Kazi

Gias Uddin Azam Shah was a great ruler of Bengal. He was very kind and just. He was fond of hunting. Oneday he went a hunting at a nearby jungle. He aimed at a fawn but his aim missed the fawn and by chance the arrow pierced the son of a widow. The widow was very much shocked and disappointed as the victim was her only child. She went to the Kazi to pray for justice. She complained against the Sultan. The Kazi was moved to pity hearing the shocking news. But he could not decide what to do. Because the complaint was against the Sultan. If he did justice to the widow, the Sultan might be displeased. Again if he did not do it, he would remain guilty to the widow and to almighty Allah. At last he made up his mind to bring the Sultan for justice. The Sultan stood before the Kazi. The Kazi asked him whether the complaint is true. The Sultan answered in the affirmative and he was ordered to compensate the loss of the widow. The Sultan agreed and compensated the widow. The Kazi thanked the Sultan for his sense of duty. The Sultan also thanked the Kazi for his justness.

Slow and Steady Wins the Race

There lived a hare and a tortoise in the same jungle. The hare used to taunt the tortoise for its slow pace. One day he challenged the tortoise in a race. The tortoise said, "You can run quite fast, no doubt. But I think you boast about your speed more than you can run. I think I can beat you."

"Do you hear that?" said the hare to a fox, who was standing near. "Could anyone even think that such a slow-coach could beat me in a race?"

"It would be a good joke if he did," said the fox. "Do you wish to run a race? I will be the judge, if you care to have me."

"That suits me well," answered the hare.

"I am willing," said the tortoise.

So the fox marked off a place for starting, and set up stake at the goal. The race began. The hare hounded along and was very soon far ahead of the tortoise. He called back to the fox, "I think I shall take a little nap before I finish the race; the tortoise will not reach here for an hour or more." So he lay down in some bushes and went to sleep.

Every minute brought the tortoise a little nearer to the goal. He did not stop for a second.

At last he passed the hare, but the hare still slept. On and on he plodded; it was a long way, but he had no thought of stopping.

He came nearer and nearer the goal. At last his foot touched the stake.

The hare wakened, stretched himself, and leaped toward the goal. "What, you here!" he cried when he saw the tortoise. "How did you ever reach here?"

"Just by keeping at it," said the tortoise.

The Key to Make Good Result in The Exam

Liton is a brilliant student. Though he wants to make good result, he does not attend classes regularly. Rather going to a coaching center, he memorises answers from guide books and sheets and finds that he cannot cut a good figure in the exams. One day his class teacher called him and enquired about the ways of preparing his lessons. Liton gave him a clear idea about his dependence on coaching center and memorization process.

Mr. Jalil, his class teacher, was an eminent teacher in his area who was elected as a National Best Teacher too. He told Liton to meet him after school hours. Liton was also in intense pressure from his parents to do well in school. So, he met his class teacher at 4 pm in the school library. There his teacher told him that memorization without realization or study without definite time-plan is a stupid job and it never helps to cut a good figure in exams. He, then told him to be regular in classes and made him understand that if he listened to his lessons attentively in classes and took note on them and studied accordingly at home, there would be no need to attend coaching or memorize anything. It is a natural learning process which enables a student to feel his inner strength. Finally, Mr. Jalil served a lesson plan according to Liton's subjects to follow accordingly.

Next three months, Liton, as an obedient student tried his best to follow the rules and started to feel that study too can be a matter of pleasure. Gradually, Liton has become a punctual guy with good knowledge on his subjects. Consequently, he has found that he is cutting better figures in each and every exam from then on.

How could he get the meat? He could not climb the tree. What good would it do if he could? The crow would fly away when she saw him coming. He could not coax the crow to come down to the ground. She knew what a fox likes to eat.

At last the fox had a happy thought. He said to himself, "A crow is one of the proudest birds I ever knew. I will flatter her and she will forget about the meat."

So he called out in his sweetest voice, "Good day, my pretty bird"; but the crow did not reply. She only stepped about proudly on the branch.

"I wish I had such a beautiful form as you have," said the fox.

Still no answer, but the crow held up her head and turned it first to one side and then to the other, showing that she was pleased.

"What a graceful neck and bright eye!" said the fox. "The other birds may well be jealous of you."

No answer yet. She only raised her wings a little and gazed down upon the fox.

"If your voice were only as beautiful as your form and your dress, you would be queen of all the birds; but it seems that you cannot talk at all. What a pity that you are dumb!"

The crow gave a loud "caw!" As she did so, the meat fell from her mouth. The fox snapped it up quickly.

A True Love Shown by Cordelia Towards her Father King Lear

Long long ago there lived a king in England. He was over eighty and in the wrong side of life. He had three daughters. He decided to divide his kingdom (রাজা) among his three daughters, but before doing that he thought of calling each of them to know how much they loved him. The eldest daughter told that she loved the king from the core of her heart. She loved him like honey. The second daughter told him that she loved the king like sweets. She could do anything for her father. At this the king was very glad and satisfied (সন্তুষ্ট). At last, he called his youngest daughter, Cordelia. The king wanted to know how much she loved him. Then the youngest daughter told that she loved him like salt. At this, the king became very angry:

He ordered his soldier to put her away in the jungle. The king divided the kingdom into two parts and presented equally among the two daughters. On the other hand, one day the prince of another country came for hunting into the jungle and found the youngest daughter of the king. The daughter was very beautiful and the prince liked her very much. He married her. After many years, the king was very helpless because his daughters left him away as they were very selfish (খার্ষপুর). Then the king left his kingdom and went to the jungle. One day he was very hungry and saw a palace nearby. He entered the palace and begged food from them. The youngest daughter came out and knew her father. She was very pleased to see her father and cooked many delicious (সুস্বাদু) food items. But she did not use salt and so the king could not eat the food. He rebuked (তিরঙ্কার করা) his daughter for not using salt. He told that he could not eat any food without salt. The daughter reminded him that she loved him like salt and so she was left away in the jungle. At this, the king became very sad and burst into tears. Then the king repented to his youngest daughter and prayed to God for her betterment.

Happiness Lies in the Contentment

Once there lived a happy cobbler who passed his days in working and singing from morning till night. A rich neighbor of him was banker who one day said to him, "How much do you earn a year?" The cobbler replied that he had never saved his one year's income and even he did not know how many days a year had. Hearing this, the banker became surprised (অবাক). He asked the cobbler what he did with his money. The cobbler told that he lived from hand to mouth. In fact the cobbler (মুড়ি) earned very little and spent all the money he earned a day to support himself and he had no ambition (আকাঙ্ক্ষা). He had no demand for amenities that had not possessed.

So poverty could not stand in the way of his happiness. At this, a deep thought occurred in the mind of the banker. He sighed, "How helpless I am!" A vast property belonged to the banker. But an unsatisfaction (অস্তুষ্টি) always troubled him. So he always wanted more riches which snatched away his happiness. The banker said to himself, "What is use of this possession when I'm deprived of real peace?" He thought he was poorer than the cobbler. So he began to find out happiness giving away all his riches to the poor. In fact happiness is a relative factor which varies from person to person. It can't be possessed in spite of having vast properties.

Look Before You Leap

Once a crocodile wanted her four children to be educated. So she went to a fox and asked him to educate her children. The fox willingly agreed to do so. Being satisfied with the speech of the fox, the crocodile left her children to the fox. But the fox was cunning by nature and he was fond of eating crocodile's kids. So, he ate one of them and kept the other three.

After a week the crocodile came to the fox to meet her sweet kids and enquired about their children. The fox assured that the kids are learning very swiftly and they are meritorious too. Being satisfied with the speech of the fox, the crocodile left the place. In the meantime the cunning fox again ate one of them. The crocodile again came to the fox and the fox showed one kid twice making a total of four. The crocodile became satisfied and went away.

The next week the crocodile again came to see her kids. Now only one kid was left. The fox followed the same trick before the crocodile and told her that their education would be complete by the following week. Now the fox produced the kid four times. The crocodile came back with joyous mind. Then the fox ate up the remaining (অবশিষ্ট) kid and deserted (ছেড়ে যাওয়া) the place forever.

After a week the crocodile came with pleasant mind to take away her children. But Alas! She found nobody in the jungle. She searched her sweet children here and there but found nothing. Finally, she understood the matter and left the place with profound (গভীর) grief.

A Scholar and a Boatman

There was a poor boatman in a village. He was illiterate. He used to row in boat from morning till evening only to meet his both ends meet. Once a scholar was going to a place by his boat. It was the beginning of the summer season. The boatman set sail and the boat was advancing smoothly. The scholar said to the boatman, "Did you read history?"

The boatman said, "No." The scholar told him that without any knowledge of history one-fourth of his life was spoilt. He looked at the beautiful scenery and asked again whether he had read geography. As usual the reply of the boatman was in the negative. This time the scholar said that one half of the boatman's life was spoilt. Then they were silent for some time. It was afternoon. The scholar broke the silence and said to the boatman, "Do you know anything about science?" "No. nothing do I know of science", was the answer of the boatman. The scholar said to him that his life was of no use. Three-fourths of his life were spoilt. Hearing this the boatman remained silent. All on a sudden, the sky became covered with dark clouds. The 'Kalboishakhi' began to blow in the form of a storm. The scholar was very much frightened.

This time the boatman said to him, "Sir, do you know how to swim?" The scholar replied in the negative in a pitiful voice. The boatman then said, "The boat is going to sink. Now I see your whole life is spoilt. Your bookish knowledge is of no use here."
